The 2015 session of the Utah Legislature reached the end of its constitutionally-mandated 45 days Thursday night. This year's highlights included debates over Medicaid expansion, prison relocation, pay raises for teachers and state employees, the gas tax, anti-discrimination protections for the LGBT community, religious freedom guarantees, the right to die, Utah's caucus and convention system, medical marijuana, cock fighting and seat belts, among other issues.

On Friday's AU we'll recap the 2015 legislative session with Deseret News commentators Frank Pignanelli & LaVarr Webb. We'll feature comments from Governor Gary Herbert. And we'll talk with Jason Stevenson, Education & Communications Director with the Utah Health Policy Project and Dan Bammes, Communications Director with the Utah Foundation.
