Last week, the U.S. Supreme Court upheld a key part of the Affordable Care Act, affirming that the federal government can provide tax subsidies to those who buy health insurance. So now what?

Rich McKeown of Leavitt Partners, Shaun Greene of Arches Health Plan and Jason Stevenson of the Utah Health Policy Project join Jennifer Napier-Pearce to discuss how the decision will affect health care in Utah as well as the ongoing negotiations over Healthy Utah, the state's proposed alternative to Medicaid expansion.
